Strengthening Accountability and Learning for Ukraine's Recovery

Triple Line works with investors, donors and delivery partners to ensure programmes are grounded in evidence, accountable to stakeholders, and adaptive to change.

MEL is central to good programme management — showing if projects are on track, informing decisions, ensuring accountability for funds, and identifying what works. We design monitoring, evaluation and learning (MEL) systems that capture community voices, strengthen local capacity, and build information flows that improve trust, resilience and long-term impact.

Our specialised MEL team supports development, resilience and humanitarian programmes of all sizes. We provide embedded services, act as external advisors, and serve as independent evaluators for donors, NGOs, foundations and governments. Our track record includes multi-country evaluations, fund management reviews and results frameworks for large-scale challenge funds.

We also work closely with governments, the private sector and civil society to ensure MEL approaches are locally relevant, effective for measuring impact, and responsive to learning needs. Our multi-disciplinary reach spans Europe, Sub-Saharan Africa, Asia and beyond.

We bring expertise in:

- Design, co-creation and refinement of MEL frameworks, including theories of change, results frameworks and tools for implementation.
- Data quality assurance and performance monitoring, supporting high quality data collection, data validation, progress and completion reporting.
- Performance and process evaluations at the baseline, mid-term and end-line stages of a programme; including forward-looking strategic reviews.
- Tailored qualitative data collection and analysis methodologies using a range of approaches such as outcome harvesting, process tracing, contribution analysis and innovative non-indicator-based methods for measuring systems-level change.
- Impact measurement through quantitative data collection, analysis and modelling.
- Facilitating organisational and programmatic learning for adaptive management, including workshops; and delivery of learning syntheses and briefing papers.
- Technical advice on and quality assurance of reports, evaluations, data and other products.

Locally grounded monitoring, evaluation and learning for future prosperity.

Triple Line brings decades of experience delivering timely evidence to help programme teams understand impact and adapt strategies for stronger results. Our work spans employment, education, climate, governance, innovation, and inclusion of refugees, IDPs, youth and women.

Evaluation and results measurement: Credible measurement is essential in fragile and recovery settings. We work with local partners to generate reliable data and deliver insightful evaluations. For FCDO, we provided an adaptive learning function for its International Action Against Corruption programme. For Standard Chartered Futuremakers, we designed the theory of change, results framework, and monitoring system.

Innovative MEL and learning partnerships: We co-create evidence with clients using participatory and systems approaches. With Porticus, we generate actionable insights for programmes supporting displaced children. For Mastercard Foundation, we identified pathways to system change in its job creation portfolio.

Resilience, markets and cost-benefit analysis: Recovery requires understanding how interventions affect systems and livelihoods. For Mastercard Foundation's Young Africa Works, we assessed MSME growth, profitability and job creation. We have also designed cost-benefit studies for private investments, from childcare in Rwanda to bundled extension services in India.

Gender equality and social inclusion: Recovery must be inclusive. We advise donors and implementers on mainstreaming gender, disability and social inclusion, ensuring programmes reflect the voices of excluded groups. We supported ADB's women's economic empowerment strategy in South Asia and evaluated SIDA's inclusion-focused programmes in energy, finance, education and decent work.
